Chosein Yamahata & Bobby Anderson (2022): Demystifying Myanmar’s Transition and Political Crisis

Offers a unique characterization of Myanmar’s transition through a dual lens: the grassroots sector and the periphery. Explores international assistance towards community development, grassroots peace, and political stability. Tackles Myanmar’s transition for genuine democratization hijacked by the 2021 coup facing nation-wide resistance.

Myanmar in a Podshell - Episode 7: Local Democracy - A Feasible Alternative to Top-Down Governing?

Guests: Tamas Wells (University of Melbourne) & Sam Sai Kham (Erasmus University Rotterdam)

Democracy is one of the most used buzzwords when it comes to Myanmar. In episode 7 of "Myanmar in a Podshell", we don't talk primarily about democracy as a form of governing or as a buzzword, but about concrete democracy or democratic structures and practices at the community level in Myanmar. In other words, we want to understand what people in Myanmar actually make of the concept of democracy.

Call for submissions

The Southeast Asian Movement

For the inaugural issue of The Southeast Asian Movement at Yale's publication, we are looking for academic articles, op-eds, personal essays, and creative writing that take on the question of translation in a Southeast Asian context.

Translation refers not only to the act or rendering the meaning of a word or text in another language, but can also refer to the conversion of something from one medium to another, or the process of moving something from one place to another.

We are interested in writing that engages with this sense of movement across linguistic, geographical, or political spheres. We welcome submissions from graduate and undergraduate students from all institutions, and look forward to reading your work and cultivating conversations about Southeast Asia at Yale and beyond.
